

Welcome to Year 6's Celebration Assembly

Take a look at some of the fantastic work that we have been sent...

Our orig 'army' of frogs

Surprisingly, the right, beautiful
cuttlefish could lift
the pile of addicting,
ancient pile of blue
books, which the boy
as small as a mouse,
sat to sadly, silently
read.

- Damara

In the distance,
two bright
fluorescent butterflies
were gently tying
a string to pick up the ancient
fragile books
by Bianca

Keona

On the table, the rainbow-coloured butterflies shine their bright colours in the great sky.

Keona

Elegantly, the two beautiful, ~~sincere~~ butterflies marvellously carried a mountain of ancient books, which were fragile like a piece of transparent glass.

- Cynde

Magically, the two ^{graceful} butterflies were carrying 4 ancient books, a small miserable man sat upon the ancient books.

- Nikita McDonald.

Leon

SPaG

Concidentally, the picturesque butterflies lifted the large, heavy tomes.

Majestically, the two colourfully beautiful butterflies carried the enormous stack of books.

By Eddie

Elegantly, the beautiful and
majestic butterflies pulled up
the ancient pile of books
carrying the red-hooded dwarf
of a man.
Magnus

As strong as they could, the fragile
butterflies held the lonely, miserable
a fragile, porcelain doll.

L.O. I can empathise with a character from an extract.

This book is set during World War Two. Children like William were sent away from towns and cities to the countryside to help keep them safe. They had to live with strangers.

What do you think it would have been like to be sent away from home like this?

I would be nervous for my dad because he went to war but then scared because I'm leaving home and my mum.

Imagine you are a child such as William, what do you think you would have felt as you took the train to somewhere you had never been before?

I would feel terrified because I'm going to a unknown place not knowing what will be there and I will feel scared for my mum and my dad because they could of got killed from the bombs and I would be a little worried about where I would sleep and stay and will the people be nice.

What do you think you would have told your new family about yourself to help them get to know you?

First I would like to know them first then I would see what kind of person they are. If they are nice and understanding I would tell them about what I like my favourite food facts about my family and interesting things about me.

What questions could you have asked the family you were staying with to help you settle in?

- Do you have any children?
- Can you tell me about the place?
- What is your job?
- What do you like to do?
- Is it fun here?

What would help you to feel at home in your new surroundings?

- Bring a picture of my mum and dad.
- Bring my favourite toy.
- Bring something important.
- Bring my favourite blanket.

This book is set during World War Two. Children like William were sent away from towns and cities to the countryside to help keep them safe. They had to live with strangers.

What do you think it would have been like to be sent away from home like this?

I think I would have felt devastated because being away from the family doesn't always have a positive feeling. I think I might also feel excited since it might be fun to explore but without the person I know to explore with, it feels lonely.

Imagine you are a child such as William, what do you think you would have felt as you took the train to somewhere you had never been before?

If I was William Beech I would have felt upset because not being with your family or parents is not a great feeling.

What do you think you would have told your new family about yourself to help them get to know you?

I would have told them my name, what my favourite food is, what I like to do, what I like, what I dislike and my age.

What questions could you have asked the family you were staying with to help you settle in?

Questions:

- Are there any rules, if there are rules what are they?
- What should I call them?
- What is the house number?
- Where is the bathroom?

What would help you to feel at home in your new surroundings?

- Pictures of my family and parents
- Clothes that my parents bought for me
- Items that my parents and family bought for me

What do you think it would have been like to be sent away from home like this?

What i would have felt was a trickle of rage shoot down my spine as fast as a bullet because i was taken to school and thought that i was on a school trip to be left to be picked to live with a stranger who i don't even know.

21 Jan (Edited 21 Jan)

Good morning. The sun is shining and the sky is blue. Yesterday, you may have seen in the news that a new President was inaugurated in the USA. He has already made a number of changes in his first hours of office. If you were to become a world leader TODAY, what changes would you make first for your people? What's the first thing you would do?

We can't wait to see your ideas!

Aryan Patel 21 Jan

I would try to stop the spread of COVID-19 by arranging Lockdowns and certain restrictions.

Aarav Shah 21 Jan

I agree with Aryan because there are many problems in the world however Covid-19 is one of the biggest.

Miss Blackford 21 Jan

Such a great question! I can't wait to read all of your answers. Thank you Aryan and Aarav for sharing!

Sofia Gould 21 Jan

Instead of having people go out to do shopping I would give everyone a list of what they want and deliver it to their house free Keep safe everyone

Ishaq Khalil 21 Jan

I would add more restrictions to stop the amount of Covid rates and stop poverty

Lucy Guild 21 Jan

For everyone to be happy and safe

Kelsey West 21 Jan

I would change racism and i would also change how some people get treated :)

Caiden Brown 21 Jan

I would change the way people must walk away from homeless people :)

Miss Handley 21 Jan

Thank you for all of these comments! They are all very good ideas.
